Excerpt: . . . we find a source of heat which--if the amount of radium and thorium in the interior of the earth is not decidedly less than that which is found near the surface--would not only balance the earth's loss of heat by radiation, but actually increase its average temperature. Though reasons may easily be found why the surface layer of the earth may be richer in radio-active products than the core, I think that we are nevertheless driven to the conclusion that the earth is now, and has been for a long time, in thermal equilibrium, and that shrinkage by cooling does not account for any of the more recent displacements. Why, then, should not the earth long ago have settled for itself all seismic questions, and have come to rest in a comfortable state of equilibrium After the four or five million years which it...
